

DEC 26
630. M.
D

Frank J. Garrison,
(Care of Houghton, Osgood & Co.)
Boston,
Mass.

45-52

Ms. A. 1. 1 v. 9, p. 62 A

Mr Wendell is to dine with us this evening, in company with Mr. and Mrs. Emerson. — Charles has been to a skating rink with Henry & Oswald, and seen considerable of the city.

New York, Dec. 26, 1878.

My dear Frank:

The letter of Madame Venturi, enclosed in yours received this morning, fully explains the reasons why she was so desirous of obtaining my "moral support" in reference to her editorial supervision of The Shield, and her connection with the C. D. A. movement. It turns out, as I surmised it would, that there are those whose bigotry is such that they would gladly see her "sent to Coventry" on account of her independent but private and unobtrusive religious opinions; and others who are more shocked at a faithful exposure of the upholders of the Acts aforesaid than they are at the Acts. I know these classes thoroughly by long experience in the anti-slavery struggle, and I always regarded them as more detrimental to our progress than the most rampant opponents.

Though I had to write to Madame V. somewhat at a venture, and very hastily to secure the foreign mail the next day after the receipt of her telegram, it seems that my letter proved both comforting and strengthening, and helped to turn the scale in her favor; for sending which she expresses herself in very grateful terms. She is a noble woman. I cannot believe that Mrs. Butler is at all inclined to seek the dismissal or resignation of Madame V.; but the latter makes no allusion to her, and, indeed, abstains wholly from personal references.

The next day after our arrival here, I wrote to Ellie how Charlie and I got along. I very acutely felt the effects of my fall before leaving, especially in my knees. Tuesday afternoon I began to feel sharp pains in my right side, and by bed-time the inflammation was so extended and deep that I had to apply prepared mustard leaves to the affected parts during the night, getting but slight alleviation.

from them. Yesterday the heat and soreness affected the whole side. On going to bed I conclude to try a wet compress, and to-day find myself very much relieved. I think my fall must have caused this trouble. Fanny has procured from a neighboring apothecary the liniment according to Georgina's prescription, and I shall give that a trial.

The tree procured by Harry for Christmas eve was even more symmetrical than that of last year, and when lighted made a very beautiful and brilliant appearance. Mrs. McKim came in the afternoon with Lloyd, Phil, and Katherine, and Wendell and Charlie McKim in the evening. There were no outside visitors to look at the spectacle except Mrs. Horace White, Mrs. Birney, and one of Harry's Kansas lawyers, Mr. Pratt, and his son. People were evidently disposed to remain at home that evening, or else to go to popular entertainments. The gifts to the children were abundant, and so varied as to give them great delight - including, of course, those from Linwood Street and Rockledge. Harry exchanged the gold bracelets which he purchased for Fanny as a birthday gift, and which she did not wish to retain, for an elegant and costly gold pin. He also presented her with a very elegant satin cloak, lined with ermine, besides with other ~~fine~~ gifts. Fanny reciprocated by various presents. Wendell's gifts to Harry and Fanny and the children were chiefly in the shape of elegant books and pictorials. What pleased Harry particularly was the photographic group of his children, which ~~Harry~~^{Fanny} had taken without his knowledge, and which you compliment as so pleasing and successful. The duplicate will be prized by us at Rockledge.

I shall be much pleased to get, on my return, the photograph of little Elizabeth which has been taken for "yar-gar."

Harry left at one o'clock to-day for Washington, to be gone several days.

Your loving Fathers

Frank J. Garrison,
(Care of Houghton, Osgood & Co.)

Boston,
Mass.

DEC 26
630. M.
D 78

Ms. A. 1. 1 v. 9, p. 62A

Wendell is to dine with us this evening, in company with Mr. and Mrs. Emerson. - Charlie has been to a skating rink with Howard & Oswald, and been considerably of the city.

New York, Dec. 26, 1878.

My dear Frank:

The letter of Madame Venturi, enclosed in yours received this morning, fully explains the reasons why she was so desirous of obtaining my "moral support" in reference to her editorial supervision of The Shield, and her connection with the C. D. A. movement. It turns out, as I surmised it would, that there are those whose bigotry is such that they would gladly see her "sent to Coventry" on account of her independent but private and unobtrusive religious opinions; and others who are more shocked at a faithful exposure of the upholders of the Acts aforesaid than they are at the Acts. I know these classes thoroughly by long experience in the anti-slavery struggle, and I always regarded them as more detrimental to our progress than the most rampant opponents.

Though I had to write to Madame V. somewhat at a venture, and very hastily to secure the foreign mail the next day after the receipt of her telegram, it seems that my letter proved both comforting and strengthening, and helped to turn the scale in her favor; for sending which she expresses herself in very grateful terms. She is a noble woman. I cannot believe that Mrs. Butler is at all inclined to seek the dismissal or resignation of Madame V.; but the latter makes no allusion to her, and, indeed, abstains wholly from personal references.

The next day after our arrival here, I wrote to Ellie how Charlie and I got along. I very acutely felt the effects of my fall before leaving, especially in my knees. Tuesday afternoon I began to feel sharp pains in my right side, and by bed-time the inflammation was so extended and deep that I had to apply prepared mustard leaves to the affected parts during the night, getting but slight alleviation.

from them. Yesterday the heat and soreness affected the whole side. On going to bed I conclude to try a wet compress, and to-day find myself very much relieved. I think my fall must have caused this trouble. Fanny has procured from a neighboring apothecary the liniment according to Georgina's prescription, and I shall give that a trial.

The tree procured by Harry for Christmas eve was even more symmetrical than that of last year, and when lighted made a very beautiful and brilliant appearance. Mrs. McKim came in the afternoon with Lloyd, Phil, and Katherine, and Wendell and Charlie McKim in the evening. There were no outside visitors to look at the spectacle except Mrs. Horace White, Mrs. Birney, and one of Harry's Kansas lawyers, Mr. Pratt, and his son. People were evidently disposed to remain at home that evening, or else to go to popular entertainments. The gifts to the children were abundant, and so varied as to give them great delight - including, of course, those from Linwood Street and Rockledge. Harry exchanged the gold bracelets which he purchased for Fanny as a birthday gift, and which she did not wish to retain, for an elegant and costly gold pin. He also presented her with a very elegant satin cloak, lined with ermine, besides with other ~~the~~ gifts. Fanny reciprocated by various presents. Wendell's gifts to Harry and Fanny and the children were chiefly in the shape of elegant books and pictorials. What pleased Harry particularly was the photographic group of his children, which ~~Harry~~^{Fanny} had taken without his knowledge, and which you compliment as so pleasing and successful. The duplicate will be prized by us at Rockledge.

I shall be much pleased to get, on my return, the photograph of little Elizabeth which has been taken for "yar-gar."

Harry left at one o'clock to-day for Washington, to be gone several days.
Your loving Father